

Dear FCC,

i am writing in response the the news about recent lobbying efforts of the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB). There is clearly no reason to limit what can and can not be heard on paid for radio stations such as XM and Sirius. I am not a subscriber to either of these stations, however the point and ridiculousness of the action is very clear. Whether the service is paid for or not, if they are rpoviding a service that epople want, and it is not braodcasting anything illegal, or in an illegal manner, there should be no reason to limit the content proveded by these stations. Please stop any efforts to compromise the integrity of our American values by letting sattelite radio services continue to play by the rules and broadcast the content they are currently doing and let them expand. There will no no economic damage. The market can only get bigger, providing more economic incentive to keep these staqtions alive.

Thank you for you time. I hope you agree there is no compelling argument that can be made to limit the content provided by companies such as these.
